Allegheny Conference on Community Development Congratulates Flabeg Corporation on Decision to Expand in the Pittsburgh Region

(Pittsburgh – August 20, 2008) The Allegheny Conference on Community Development and its affiliates, including the Pittsburgh Regional Alliance (PRA), congratulate the Flabeg Corporation on its decision to expand operations in the Pittsburgh region.

The news of the expansion came earlier this afternoon during a special economic development announcement event with Governor Rendell at Clinton Commerce Park (Allegheny County).

“The Pittsburgh region boasts many strengths, but in particular, high technology and advanced manufacturing converge here and position the region as a leader in the global supply chain for a growing alternative energy industry,” said Allegheny Conference on Community Development Chief Executive Officer Michael Langley.

“These strengths, as well as other regional assets, including 2,000-plus acres of developable land in the Pittsburgh International Airport corridor allow our region to be competitive for business expansion and attraction. Ready-to-go sites in the airport corridor have been a regional need, and we’ve made tremendous progress in responding to that need.

“It’s a pleasure to welcome the Flabeg Corporation to the Clinton Commerce Park, strategically located in the airport corridor. We expect that German-owned Flabeg will continue to find the Pittsburgh region—home to more than 70 German-owned companies and home to hundreds of international companies—a perfect location for its business,” said Langley.
