Search at ImagineMyNewJob.com
Comprehensive, one-stop job search engine can help new graduates launch careers in Pittsburgh

(PITTSBURGH – May 5, 2009) As thousands of graduating college students finish up finals and head into the workforce, there are more than 20,000 available positions in the Pittsburgh region, according to ImagineMyNewJob.com, the 10-county<sup>1</sup> region’s most comprehensive online job search resource. The site – developed by the Allegheny Conference on Community Development as a public service – is a free, easy-to-use “one stop shop” that pools all the online postings from search engines such as Monster and CareerBuilder.com, as well as from individual company job sites.

Of the 20,000+ available jobs currently on the site, more than 80 percent are full-time positions, and approximately half offer annual salaries of more than $40,000. Available opportunities run the gamut from internships to full-time positions, appropriate for graduates with Associates degrees to Ph.D.s.

“Many of our region’s employers are hiring, despite what we’ve been hearing about the economy, and it’s imperative that we connect our young talent with regional employers that are looking for skilled candidates,” said Laura Fisher, senior vice president of the Allegheny Conference. “There are a lot of opportunities here, and ImagineMyNewJob.com is a great tool for recent graduates – or anybody looking for a new job in the Pittsburgh region – to discover and access those opportunities.”

A critical addition to any employment search toolbox, ImagineMyNewJob.com queries can be sorted by salary range, industry, keyword, company name, job title, radius (up to 70 miles around downtown Pittsburgh) and more. Users can have new job listings, according to their specifications, automatically sent to them via e-mail. They also can access a LinkedIn.com group and other information about the Pittsburgh region as a smart place to live and launch a career.

“Having gone to college and then launched a business here myself, I understand the advantages of living and working in the Pittsburgh region firsthand,” said Luke Skurman, CEO of College Prowler and publisher of a new guide book to the region called the Pittsburgh Urban Guru. “It’s an accessible environment where young professionals can tap
