

Alison Hahn is a technical advisor of new nuclear with the Nuclear Energy Institute (NEI) where she manages projects designed to improve the nuclear energy industry's prospects for deploying new nuclear power plants with a focus on external coordination, including federal advanced reactor programs. She was previously with the Department of Energy for 14 years where she most recently served as the acting Associate Deputy Assistant Secretary for Nuclear Reactors in the Department of Energy focused on the deployment of advanced reactors in a variety of applications. Ms. Hahn holds a bachelor's degree in nuclear engineering from Pennsylvania State University and a master's degree in environmental engineering from John Hopkins University.

